A Long Ago Summer When Ice Formed on the Fourth of July.

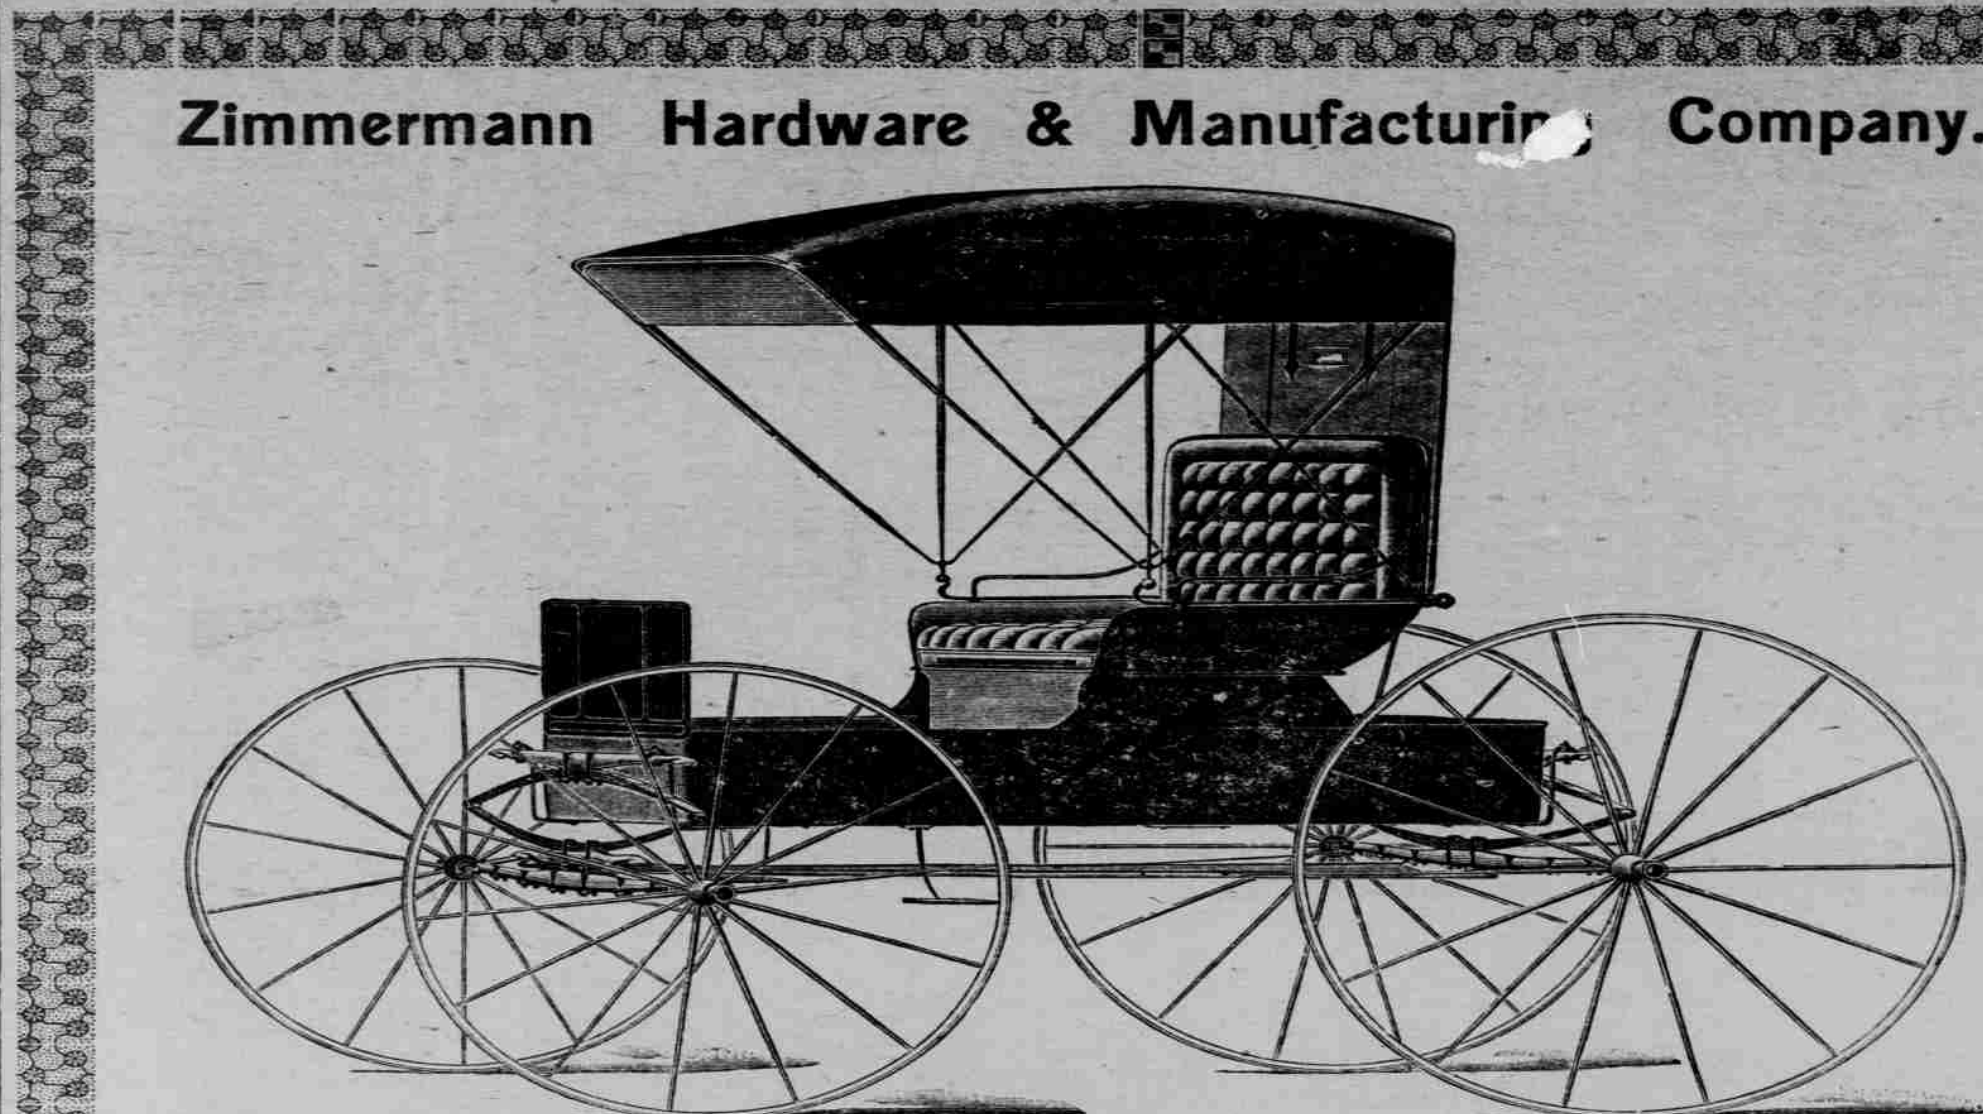

Many readers will not soon forget the hot, dry summer of 1901 and the lack of rain and the hot south winds have ruined the corn and injured the wheat and oats. But not many are living to day that remember the summer of 1816 and how there was snow and frost in every month and vegetation of all kinds was nearly all frozen. The morning of the 4th of July water was frozen over and in August corn was killed outright and cut for fodder. What little corn did escape was in very favored localities and states. Corn brought unheard of prices and farmers were obliged to provide themselves with corn grown in 1815 for the seed used in the spring of 1817; this seed being difficult to get at $5 a bushel. The price of all bread stuffs went soaring and flour sold in 1817 for $13 a barrel.—Freeport (Ill.) Journal.

Contrary to the busy activity in most places, the people of Springfield, Mass., seem to have plenty of time on their hands. The Republican of that place prints the following mathematical contribution:

To the Editor of the Republican: There is a sort of enthusiastic hyperbole in the statement of a Wichita paper that is quite refreshing. It is a sample of "the regular?" It is said that the "profits of the crops for the last three years could plaster the state with $2.00 bills." Let us see! There are 82,236 square miles, 8,420,966,400 square rods, 2,292,608,102,400 square feet of entire Kansas surface. Now, allowing 6 1/2 bills to the square foot (6.35 really), we find the profits to be $29,039,702,626,400. Whew! Farming is profitable.

Mark Twain declares that when a man makes an appeal for charity it is a great mistake to get everybody ready to give money and then not pass the hat. "Some years ago in Hartford," he said the other day, "we all went to the church on a hot, sweltering night to hear the annual report of a city missionary. He told of the life in the cellar where poverty resided, he gave instances of the heroism and devotion of the poor. Well, he worked me up to a great state. I couldn't wait for him to get through. I had $400 in my pocket. I wanted to give that and borrow more to give. But he didn't pass the plate and it grew hotter and we grew sleepier. My enthusiasm went down, down, down—$100 at a time, till finally, when the plate came round I stole 10 cents out of it. So you see a neglect like this may lead to crime."

Farmers who make a practice of working from early to late and doing chores at both ends by lantern light, hurry through and to bed tired, will find their boys some day going to the city, or seeking some other means of getting a livelihood. Farmer's wives who make all of the daylight and much of the night a perpetual scene of hard work will find their daughters anxious to get away from the farm. With modern machinery and labor-saving appliances this prolonged daily toil is unnecessary. Some time for rest, recreation, reading and thinking will hold them. Many farmers know the strands which holds the hearts of the boys and girls to the farm. Scores do not, nor can they learn. For this I am sorry. Some drudgery will creep in, but for the most part it is uncalled for on the modern farm.—Iowa Homestead.

Died From Snake Bite.

The nine year old son of Gustav Maune of Knauston, met a horrible death from the bite of a rattlesnake, Tuesday night. The little fellow was out with cattle Monday, and not returning in the evening his mother became alarmed and she and her two sons started in search of the boy, the father not being at home. They did not find him until day light the next morning. After being struck by the snake he was not able to get home and lay out on the prairie all night. When found he was able to tell them a big snake had bitten him, but could tell none of the particulars. In his delirium he talked of catching the rabbit and it is supposed that he had thrust his hand into a hole and that the snake was in there.

The boy was brought in to Dr. Gray, but the poison had got in the blood and the boy was too far gone for medical aid. The boy's arm and chest swelled up and turned black, and he passed away Tuesday night. The funeral took place Thursday. Mr. and Mrs. Maune have the sympathy of their friends and the community in the loss of their child in such a horrible manner.—Garden City Herald, July 27.

He has two cars more which he has decided to feed. He will try them on wheat mixed with other grain, and he is only one of many who will feed wheat to cattle. In counties further southeast in this state the experiment will be tried extensively. A young man from Neodesha was in Reno county this week buying wheat for feeding purposes. He says that many farmers in his section will have to depend largely on wheat for feed.—Hutchinson News.
